PERSONAL VISION AND MISSION

My passion for literature is my ikigai, the purpose that drives my work and identity. I believe that knowledge must extend beyond the self and serve the betterment of society. As a teacher, I recognise the immense responsibility and power in shaping your minds and guiding them towards becoming empathetic and responsible citizens. Through my academic and creative efforts, I hope to inspire critical thinking, curiosity, and meaningful engagement with the world. I strive to contribute to the academic community with sincerity, integrity, and a commitment to positive change. Ultimately, my mission is to transform education into a force that moulds a thoughtful, humane, and socially conscious society.
